

WATCH PRICES ON MEAT CUTS

Fair Price Commission to Protect Housewife During "Save Money on Meat" Week

An abnormal demand for any commodity forces up the price and this condition applies to porthouse steaks and other choice cuts, says a statement issued today by James W. Funk, fair price commissioner for Utah, in connection with the "Save Money on Meat" campaign during the week of April 12 to 17. During that week the public is urged to buy those portions which have great nutritive value and are highly palatable but which cost far less than the more popular cuts.

The fair price commission, Senator Funk says, will be watching to make sure no dealer tries to make the stimulated demand for cheaper cuts an occasion for illicit profits. The retailers, he said, will be able to sell and undoubtedly will sell on a closer margin, due to the fact that they will buy and sell these portions in larger quantities. A canvass of Ogden butcher shops discloses the fact that a heavy demand for these cuts has shown itself in advance of the campaign.

Mrs. W. J. McCoy, chairman of the women's division, suggests the following recipe for pot roast of mutton with currant mint sauce:

2½ pounds of mutton (plate) Seasoning: White meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper, place on rack in dripping pan and dredge meat and bottom of pan with flour. Bake in hot oven for two hours, basting frequently with butter or butter substitute. Serve with currant mint sauce made as follows: Separate 23 tumbler of currant jelly in pieces but do not beat it. Add one to two tablespoons of finely chopped mint leaves and shavings from the orange rind. Serve around roast.

AMOS I. STONE DIES; AGED 70

Pioneer Resident Did Much Toward Upbuilding Ogden; Lived Here 63 Years

AMOS I. STONE

Amos I. Stone, pioneer resident of Ogden, died at his home, 1648 Liberty avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon of bronchitis and complications.

In the death of Mr. Stone the city loses one of its sturdy citizens, a man who did much toward the upbuilding of the city from the time it was a "settlement" until the present.

Mr. Stone was 70 years of age at his death. He was born September 1, 1849 at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the son of Amos Pease Stone and Minerva Leantine Jones.

He was married November 26, 1876 at Slaterville to Emma Webb, daughter of Charles and Jane Webb. He had come to Utah with his parents in 1859. Their outfit had consisted of three yoke of oxen, one yoke of cows and two wagons. His mother drove one of the teams most of the way. The party reached Salt Lake September 30, 1859.

Five days later the father located with his family at Sessions settlement, then known as North Canyon ward on what was later called Stone creek, ten miles north of Salt Lake. The family moved to Ogden in 1857 and from that time Amos I. Stone was an active figure in the civil and political life of the community.

While still a young man he assisted his father in carrying out a contract for the construction of part of the Utah Central track between Ogden and Salt Lake and is listed at the State Capitol as one of the pioneer builders of the road.

More than 40 years ago he was chosen as water master for Mill Creek, which position he held until his death without remuneration. During this period he defended many irrigation suits in the district court. He was a farmer and fruit raiser and was interested in several mining activities. He served on terms in the city council.

Mr. Stone leaves his wife and the following children: Amos A. Stone, Ray W. Stone and Mrs. Myrtle R. Brown. The brothers and sisters are: Mrs. Olive A. Parry, Mrs. Minerva P. Storer, Merlin I. Stone, Mrs. Sylvia Alvord, Mrs. Vinny H. Barker, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, Lewis P. Stone, Mrs. Laura J. Tribe and Bernard S. Stone, all of Ogden. There are five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday in the Seventh ward meeting house with Desmond Barker, bishop's counselor, conducting. The body may be viewed at the home on Liberty avenue tomorrow afternoon and Saturday until 1 o'clock.

Another Litigant in C. S. Court Proceedings

BOSTON, April 8.—Attorney-General Weston Allen announced today that he would file a suit for intervention in the litigation involving governing board of the Christian Science church and its publishing society. He said the papers would be presented to the court today or tomorrow.

His action will be taken in behalf of the members of the church as beneficiaries of a public charity under a law which requires that the attorney-general shall enforce the due appropriation of funds of public charities within the commonwealth.

The report of Frederic Dodge as master in the suit of the trustees of the publishing society against the directors of the mother church held that the funds of both the church and the society constituted public charities through deeds of gift executed by Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 8.—Charles W. COLLEGE BUILDS UP JUNIOR WORK

Weber Excludes Ninth Grade Students Who May Take Course in Home District

The board of trustees of Weber Normal college, at their meeting last night, voted to exclude next year all first year students who reside in districts where the ninth grade is offered in the public schools, with the intention of upbuilding the higher classes of Weber college. Ogden as a whole and parts of the county, including Huntsville and Liberty for Ogden valley, Hooper, Taylor and other communities are so provided, and the county school board is planning extensions of the ninth grade facilities this year. Lenency will be shown to those students who have no ninth grade training available in home communities, it was said, and a small first year class will be started for this purpose in the fall.

As large a part of the funds as possible will be diverted for use in the two-year course in the junior college. Prin. H. A. Dixon said today, so that the highest class of teachers and class standardization may be secured.

PREDICTS FLASHING OF PICTURES TO MARS IN FUTURE

(By International News Service) CINCINNATI, O., April 8.—That pictures as well as words may be flashed to other planets is the hope expressed by Miss Annette Covington, Cincinnati, direct descendant of Robert Fulton, builder of the first steamboat. Puzzled over the theory that actual signals are possible, Miss Covington believes that communication with other worlds will come if a long and short flash has been observed.

"In time, we might even show the Martians a picture of an earth city," said Miss Covington.

"Of course, I am still skeptical about being able to get the first communication, but once that is accomplished, the rest should be less difficult."

Miss Covington is a granddaughter of the late Samuel Fulton Chase, who was the first president of the Cincinnati chamber of commerce.

SAYS FITCH, NOT FULTON, INVENTED STEAM ENGINE

(By International News Service) COLUMBUS, Ohio.—No, Robert Fulton didn't invent the steam engine. Despite the popular impression credited Fulton with this invention, William C. Mills, curator at the Ohio Archaeological and Historical society's museum, on the Ohio state university campus here, says that the steam engine was invented by John Fitch.

A steam engine made by Fitch was operated successfully in a steamboat twenty-one years before Fulton's Clermont plied the Hudson river, according to Mills. The original working model of Fulton's boat, invented in 1786, is now in the custody of Curator Mills. Recently it was given to the Ohio Archaeological society by A. N. Whiting, of this city, great grandson of Fitch.

The engine, machinists say, contains the principles which have been reproduced in all steamboats. It is three feet long with solid wheels and an upright cylinder of steam conveyances. Fitch's first boat was successfully tested July 26, 1786. His second boat, the Perseverance, launched two years later, carried passengers between Philadelphia and Burlington. The company, whose organization was promoted by Patrick Henry, then governor of Virginia, and which provided the money for building the boat, failed, however, and the boat went to pieces.

Fitch became a bankrupt and a heartbroken man.

"We number among our pupils a princess, a marchioness, a duchess and many titled ladies," says Miss Esperance Remes, who has opened a smart shop where the dressmaking art is taught.

"We hope shortly to open a class for debutantes."

HOTEL KEEPER DENIED LICENSE

City Turns Down L. Laner, Who Recently Was Fined For Liquor Law Violation

Taking the stand that a person who has been convicted of violation of the liquor laws, might, if given the opportunity, attempt to repeat the offense, the city commission this morning refused to grant a license to L. Laner, proprietor of the Alpine hotel at 124 1-2 Twenty-fifth street. Laner was recently convicted of selling liquor on the premises and was fined $200 which he paid. The license was refused upon recommendation of J. Ray Ward, commissioner of public safety after the case had been fully investigated.

An application for a rooming house license was received from Mrs. T. J. McCoy, 278 Twenty-fifth street. The matter was referred to Commissioner Ward for investigation.

Plans and specifications for the outfall sewer in Third district, 134, were approved by the commission and authority given for advertisement of bids for the work. It was also decided to invite the water users of the West Warren district to confer with the board in regard to the installation of the new sewer before the work is started. The new system will cost $400,000 according to an estimate given by City Engineer Joseph M. Tracy.

The board granted authority for the taking over and maintenance by the city of Eccles avenue park following the receipt of a petition signed by twelve residents of this section, asking that the park be maintained by the city in the future. Permission was also granted for grading work to be begun immediately on Douglas street in the East Lynne addition.

BRITISH SEAMEN PROTEST AGAINST CHINESE COOLIES

(By International News Service) LONDON.—Chinese coolies are displacing British seamen, and the latter are getting their dander up. The seamen have protested to the board of trade, pointing out that but 8182 Chinese were employed in 1914 on British ships and that this number had doubled a year later, while the end of the war has not seen diminution of the shipowners' practice of exploiting cheap Chinese labor while British ex-fighters are jobless.

The sailors have asked that the recent act which stipulated that no alien be employed in any capacity on a British ship at a rate of pay less than the rate paid to British subjects be made operative at once.
